PFAS CONTAMINATION AT HEART MORASS:

1. PFAS levels were extremely high in all meat, skin and liver samples taken from ducks at Heart Morass, and were particularly high in the skin and livers, some between 100-1000 times the trigger point for Food Standards Australia New Zealand.
2. Coming in contact with the water or organic material of the Heart Morass is safe according to the Department of Defence (i.e. wading, retrieving ducks, dogs drinking the water).
3. EPA has stated that people who have eaten fish, eel or duck are not considered to be at risk of any adverse health effects.
4. EPA recommends that to reduce and prevent exposure to PFAS, recreational fishers and duck hunters do not consume any animals caught.
5. Field & Game Australia will allow duck hunting at the Heart Morass, however we do not encourage or condone irresponsible hunting, and assume that hunters will consume the ducks hunted at the Heart Morass.
6. Hunters understand that consuming ducks may cause them to exceed the tolerable daily intake levels recommended by Food Standards Australia New Zealand.
7. Field & Game Australia cannot recommend that hunters consume livers or skin from ducks hunted at the Heart Morass.
8. Advice has been given that if consuming ducks from the Heart Morass, to restrict consumption to skinless breast meat only, and then, only in limited amounts.

I have read and understand the risks and recommendations around PFAS contamination at the Heart Morass:
